The practice was quick to respond to any issues raised by the Pandemic and lockdown.
Risks were managed well – in particular, infection, prevention and control risks.
There was plenty of advice and guidance visible and accessible for staff and patients.

Information and guidance from government sources, NHS England and the CCG were plentiful, although there continues to be a large amount of information to digest and disseminate.

Staff were well supported throughout. Ways of working and flexible working were adapted to support staff especially those vulnerable. Additional training sessions and frequent regular meetings were undertaken.

They have no issues with supplies of PPE and there is no limited use.

Systems and processes were quickly adapted to meet requirements and are now embedded and working well.

The use of technologies such as, video conferencing, telephone consultations, EConsult has been a positive factor in managing well and has helped manage footfall in the practice. The practice environment is spacious and lends itself to good IPC measures. It has been adapted and safety measures put in place and increased.

Working collaboratively within the PCN has been positive and had a positive effect on managing during the Pandemic. This shared collaborative working will continue and be a welcome partnership in the future.

The provider has managed and continues to manage the situation well. They have not encountered any major issues.
